fact that a check upon interpretation was shown to be so necessary, as well as that it was at hand to be exercised. It seems very desirable that, so soon as ample arrangements can be made, Mr Rozario should be enabled to retire upon his well-earned laurels. But the whole question of the interpretation is forced upon public attention by the occurrence of a circumstance like that recorded; and it may seem strange that the reform in this department has not been more thoroughly prosecuted. There can be no doubt whatever that a radical reconstruction in this branch of the service was once a fond desire of H. E. the Governor; but by some unaccountable means it has got smothered Daylight -- Miten Bishi Mail leaves for up and hid by other schemes, and (if we except the cheering glimpse of manifest advancement observable in Mr Ball's appointment) the better days we had hoped for are as for off as ever. No one who has the true interests of the Colony, the interests of Justice, and the welfare of the Chinese at heart would begrudge an adequate salary to an efficient Interpreter General But it is the subject of general regret that the great abilities of the Acting Chinese Secretary have not as yet been directed to the performance of the duties

Ir seems now to be pretty well established that Colonel Gordon not only goes North with a desire to strengthen the Peace Party at Peking, but that all hopes of his taking service with China are at an end. This is important, and will doubtless bave considerable effect with those of the leading officials who are disposed to take a reasonable view of the situation. Li Hung Chang who is presumably the strongest friend of peace, is certain to place great faith in the advice tendered by a man like Gordon, coming from his old comrade, as the advice must now do, in as impartial a spirit as it is conceivable it could be. Indeed, it is more than probable that in view of the possibility that Li has a very difficult and delicate rôle to play in opposing hostilities with Rus-sia, the great Viceroy of Chihli has induced Gordon to visit him with the especial object of influencing the somewhat rabid War Party. The conqueror of Kashgar, Tso Tsung Tang, is doubtless burning with the desire to maintain or rather to recover the advantages which took years and much treasure to gain. But the real question of peace or war will be settled at Peking ; and so far as our information at present extends the conviction is beginning to force itself forward that peace, will be the decision arrived at What part Sir Thomas Wade and Colonel Gordon may actually take in the settlement of that momentous question may never become known; but unless something in the complicated machinery of Court politics in Peking arises to thwart the wishes of those who most intelligently study the welfare of the Empire, a peaceful solution of the present difficulties may be with some confidence looked for. The reports of victories gained by the Chiuese on the Kashgar frontier are almost certain to be exaggerations, awing their origin partly to the known views of Tso Tsung Tang and partly to the excited state of feeling regarding the strained relations of the two States. Considerable caution will be necessary in forming any conclusions as to telegrams now heing received, as in any case it is doubtful whether China will improve her position by aggressive movements of any kind

OLD residents will regret to hear of death by violence of Senhor José D'Aguilar, in his own house in Madrid, in the latter end of May last. The Senhor, it is supposed, was enjoying his usual afternoon sicata, when, about 3 o'clock, some one entered the house by means of false keys with intent to commit a robbery. A souffie ensued, ending in a foul murder. After some considerable trouble the desperado was secured by the police, and we may no doubt soon hear of his having been brought to trial before the Spanish Courts of Justice. Sr. José D'Aguilar served as Spanish Consul at Amoy, so long back as 1851, and Hongkong in 1856, while in 1858 he held the post of Consul General at Macao. He returned to his native land twelve years ago, in 1868. The Senhor was widely noted for his liberal charities, and his death will be lamented by many who were the recipients. of substantial relief at his hands in days gone by, and, we believe, up to the day of his death. Another most molanoboly oiroumstance connected with the Senhor's untimely end is, that, when news of his death was conveyed to Senhor Canete, another and older Consul General at Manso, and the bosom friend of D'Aguilar, he sickened at the thought of the brutal murder, and as the shock was too great for his feelings, he succombed in the course of a few days, out of sheer grief and broken-heartedness occasioned by his friend's death.

THE OPIUM TRADE.

(London and China Express, June 4 Last week the Friends' "yearly meeting " devoted a sitting to the consideration of the Opium Question, There was a full attendance of members, including Justice Sir Edward Fry, Mr Joseph W. Pease, M.P., Mr J. B. Firth M.P., and Mr G. Palmer, M.P. In a very lucid address Sir Edward explained the history and present relations of the subject, dwelling mainly upon its moral aspects as affecting the condition of so many millions of the human race, and above all, as constituting the chief and most powerful obstacle to the introduction of Christianity among the Chinese. As illustrating this mischief, the words of Prince Kung, the Chinese Prime Minister, were quoted "Take away from us your opium and your missionaries." It was stated that the demoralising effects of the habitua use of opium are of the most serious nature. Sir Thomas Wade, Ambassado of Great Britain to China, has declared that this babit is more degrading an more hopeless of cure than even inveterate gin drinking. The effects on a large proportion of the Chinese population are come to you intending to be false; or shown to be most deplorable. Even the economical effects are disastrous, as causing, annually, the withdrawal hundreds of millions of ounces of silver from China for a worse than useless drug. Sir E. The problem is no easy our that in modern Cabul, as in succent description. The problem is no easy one to solve. Nevertheless it has this simplicity of basis, that our Government in India is directly responsible for the truffic, inasmuch as there is a Govern ment monopoly of opium production. Hence there is a direct national responsibility for evil attaching to this State action, which wrongs will make me less solicitous of does not similarly strack to other objectionable matters which may be

But should this cunningly- invaders of his country? Believe me contrived proclamation be allowed (as this is impossible! There is not a mother from Ghuzni to Dakka who does not sing her children to sleep, with the promise of death to the infidal alien You do not know to extent to which you are detested! You think that poputer opinion can be awayed by a puppet. You do not understand the construction of the Afghan monarchy.

> Afghanistan, my Lord, is a confederation of chiefs and peoples who accept the ablest representative of the Royal House to be their ruler; when .. hat House cannot supply a popular repre sentative, they turn to another. The people of Afghanistan will not permit he next Amir to render him-elf independent of the voice of the nation by the aid of Russian gold or of British cannon. You are wrong if you suppose that Abdul Rahman will be able or willing to carry on the stipulations of the Gandamak Treaty. You are wrong if you expect to force upon the Afghan people a foreign policy opposed to their traditions, discountenanced by their religion, and destined to be sooner or later destructive of their independence. You are wrong if you imagine that at your dictation the Afghan nation will elect a Ruler, who comes to them neither by the power of his sword nor with the prestige of a Royal inheritance, unless indeed they do so as a temporary concession to obtain the withdrawal of your armies. One of three things will happen : Either my cousin will refuse your proffered alliance, and in so doing, adopt the course best calculated to enable him to supplant me in the affections of my people ; or he will will come to you intending to be true, If he is false to you, you will have deserved his infidelity for trying to buy him from his allegiance to his benefactors. If he is true to you, he will still have acted the part of a traitor, and your departue from the country will be the signal for a revolution. He will learn Rome, it is but one step from the Capital to the Tarpeian rock.

Pause, then, my Lord, before you allow yourself to be committed to a course of irrevocable folly and injustice. The longer a nation strays from the path of rectitude, the harder it is to return. You need have no apprehension that my British countenance, My grandfather also suffered and was over a friend of indirectly licensed or regulated by England, You know how little cause I have to defend my conduct in the past, and experience will have taught you not to ask from the Ruler of Afghanistan of the other Christian Churches in the impossibilities in the future. Your troops have reduced my country to anarchy. Order cannot be restored till they are withdrawn. Release me, then, Recall your armies, and let us leave the
